Nowadays, many people use electronic money. It can be used for payments at stores, restaurants, stations, and various other locations. Some parents use electronic money when they give money to their children due to its convenience for both of them. On the contrary, other families may still rely on cash. Some people believe that young children should not have access to electronic money.

What are the advantages of electronic money for parents and their children? Every time you use it, it keeps a record of when, where, and how much you spent. This helps parents check how their children spend money. Even when children need money and their parents are not with them, they can still get electronic money.

But there is a problem. Using electronic money might make it too easy to spend a lot. Therefore, parents need to remind their children of the importance of careful money management again and again.
